SIR PHILIP GIBBS

With Aid of Father Duffy He Lectures on Situation in Ireland.

HECKLERS ARE BAFFLED

War Correspondent Declares Both Sides Have Muddled-partially and fearlessly fair.

He talked about Ireland for an hour and a half and was interrupted from time to time, but never with a vence that threatened the success of hemence that threatened the success of his lecture, and toward the end he received the full attention of almost all of those who had come to drive him from the platform if it could be done. In this feat it is but fair to say—since he himself stressed the doctrine of fair play from the beginning of his talk to the end—that he had the assistance of a lucky accident and a celebrated soldier—the accident of the strategists who had come to break him up reserving their fire until he had his audience with him and in hand, and the personal support of the Rev. Francis P. Duffy, support of the Rev. Francis P. Duffy, famous chaplain of the 165th Infantry, who climbed to the platform at one point and told the disturbers present that they were doing Ireland more harm than good.

Sir Philip lectured upon the whole situation of Ireland, beginning a thousand years back, holding close to the proofs of history and marshalling his facts from the bed rock. He began by stating that he intended to be absolutely fair and throughout he dwelt again and again on the point that he would be ashamed to be anything but fair, and then as he went along he told how Irishmen had been silly and brutal, and that Irishmen had muddled, and that Irishmen had muddled, and that Irishmen had muddled, and that Irishmen had been incredibly stupid now and again, but that Englishmen had also been stupid.

Placards carried by pickets outside the hall before the lecture began must have warned him that there would be aroutbreak some time during the evening—

have warned him that there would be arouthreak some time during the evening—they were the usual sort as to British gold, and American money fighting Britain's battles, and Irish bables slaughtered by the Black and Tans—and the presence in the audience of little seat blocks of men and women—with the women prodominating—of necwith the women prodominating—of necaniesian must have assured ann beyond peradventure that some manner of commotion must sooner or, later be set against him. But by the orders, undoubtedly, of the controlling minds who had planned it, it did not break into articulation until a quarter before 10 colocks.

Sir Philip by then had been talking for half an hour, and the grent body of the audience was either with him or deeply interested in him. Suddenly when a feminine voice was raised in a gallery and a chorus of other feminine voices caught up the cry after her there was a leek of waste about it, and other cries caught up the cry after her there was a lack of gusto about it, and other cries came from all over demanding her si-lence. Here Father Duffy cut in. He walked to the platform and ex-plained who he was, and in the first mo-ment of silence told the audience that Sir Phillip was the man who had done more to restore the truth in regard to Ireland ore the truth in regard to Ireland and the war than any other man who has written; then he told those who were doing the shouting that they must be propagandists against Ireland, and silence fell in the house.

And so Sir Philip thanked him and And so Sir Philip thanked him shi went along with his lecture. He was interrupted rather regularly, but with no great force behind it, until he concluded his talk at nearly 10:30. Then he left the platform with nearly all the house ing and cheering him for a con childing statement he made to the effect that he believed the bulk of the people in the United States considered that self-government for Ireland without complete independence would meet all ideals of fair play. Pat Gilen stood up in the gallery while

Pat Gilen stood up in the gallery while Sir Philip was speaking and shouted: "Take him off! Take him off!" Police-man Francis Bertch of the West Forty-seventh street station heard Pat and took him off to Night Court, where Mag-istrate Ten Eyck fined him $10. Pat did not have the money, so the Magistrate suggested he spend two days in jail. Later a friend paid the fine.

BATTALION CHIEFS START PAY REVOLT

13 Accompanied by 34 Captains Ask Increase.

Thirteen battalion chiefs and fortyfour fire captains kicked over the traces yesterday and went to the Municipal CARNEGIE | TO-NIGHT AT 8:15 Public Service Commission to get an Edward MIROVIICH Planet increase of pay in the face of the protest of Chief John Kenlon of the Fire genac"; GRIEG, Plane Concerto; TCHAIKOVSKY, Symphony "Pathetique."

Chief Kenlon followed the men to the commission chambers, stayed long enough to get into an altercation with Charles I. Stengle, secretary of the commission, and stalked out in a huff.

The battalion chiefs were led by Battalion chiefs were led by Battalion Chief James E. Heffernan, while Capt. George C. Hogan was at the head of the captains. The battalion chiefs desired a ruling upon an application to be made acting deputy chiefs of the department and the captains desired a similar ruling making them legally acting battalion chiefs.

Since the two platoon system went into effect the thriteen battalion chiefs have been acting as deputy chiefs during the state of the commission and stalked out in a huff.

into effect the thirteen battalion chiefs have been acting as deputy chiefs during the off hours of the regular deputy chiefs, and the forty-four captains have been acting as battalion chiefs under similar conditions. If their requests were granted the salaries of the captains would be increased From 35.700 to $4,550 a year and the pay of the battalion chiefs would go from $4,590 to $5,500.

Morris Cukor, president of the com-mission, advised the firemen that the commission is without authority to remedy their condition, and suggested the proper relief would be to go before the Soard of Estimate and have the positions they are filling officially created and appropriations made there-for. Such an appropriation would amount to approximately $55,000 a year.

LIFE JOB FOR GEORGE F. LAMB. George 4º, Lamb, Division Superinten dent of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, resigned that position yesterday to become attorney for the Department of Justice in the appraisers stores, which is said to be a life position and in the nature of a pro-motion. The resignation will take effect March 1. Before assuming his present duties, in July, 1919, Mr. Lamb was at the head of the law department at the

New York Herald Bureau.
Albany, Feb. 25.

Gov. Miller must act on the two ticket speculators' bills before Sunday. Tonight he was still undecided on the constitutionality of the bill, making it a crime for a licensed speculator to sell a ticket for more than 50 cents above the box office price. He was asked this afternoon if the ticket sellers could not be forced to stamp their price on the Briefs were filed to-day with the Gov briefs were flied to-day with the Governor, from the opposing attorneys who appeared at the hearing before him yesterday, and he will go over them carefully before acting. The bill driving the scalpers off the streets and out of the corridors and hallways is expected to be signed, the doubt in the Governor's mind being only over the licensing bill.

Gov. Miller was asked if he favored State censorship of moving nictures as that the way to discuss Ireland in the presence of Irish sympathizers, and win with it, is to be exhaustively and imartially and fearlessly fair.

He talked about Ireland for an hour place of the subject, but that there were many place of the subject of the sub
